

OUR FIRST POINT IN NINE VISITS TO ANFIELD

Liverpool manager Bill Shankly didn't appreciate the way we drew at Anfield last Saturday. But then, he's not used to Chelsea taking a point up there—we'd lost our last eight League games at Liverpool. And the last time a Chelsea goalkeeper kept a clean sheet there was in October 1919. So take a bow, Peter Bonetti and company.

Bill Shankly said: "Chelsea didn't come to Anfield even hoping to score a goal". Tommy Baldwin looks as if he means business, though, in this face-to-face, toe-to-toe encounter with Ray Clemence.

Bill Shankly said: "Our goalkeeper might just as well have sat up in the stand with me." Instead, Clemence is on his knees, as Baldwin rolls into the net. It's a sequel to the top picture, and a free-kick to Liverpool.
